DeAsia's Movie Recommendations

My Top 3 Movies of All-Time.

Gone Girl

I loved the plot twist in this movie. It's about a woman who goes missing and her husband is the prime suspect. I spent the whole movie hating this guy and I couldnt wait until they finally had evidence to arrest him. Just when I thought it was coming to an end, the unexpected happens that proves his innocence but also opens up some darks secrets. It's a classic. If you havent seen it yet, take this as a sign that you should as soon as possible.

The Maze Runner Series

This series was full of so much action and suspense. The movie revolves around a dystopian world where everyone is basically controlled and killed by an evil government organization called WCKD. The series starts out with a group of strangers who are trapped in an enclosed environment with no memory of who they are. The only way to escape is through the maze, but anyone who has gone into the maze has not come out alive. Thomas, who is the main character, convinces his group to escape the maze and face WCKD so that the people can gain control again. Thomas and his friends have to set out on an action packed journey to save the world. I think It's just an amazing series over all. Everything was perfect. It's one of those series that once you finish you have to take a moment and reflect on life because you've gotten so sucked into the passion behind these films. 10/10 in my opinion.

Reel Steel

This movie kind of reminds me of the transformers but then again I never really watched the transformers so I can't really say if they are similar in plot. This movie is about a former boxer named Charlie, who after his ex-girlfriend dies, has to take custody of their son to which he never knew he had. When he got custody of his son he was in debt and struggling with money. He was a known gambler and would spend his money betting on fighing bots; similar to sports gambling. People would engineer robots designed to fight in boxing matches to win a prize amount of money. When his son came in the picture and increased his luck with betting they decided to work together and made their own bot named Atom. Atom who was crafted from the junkyard becomes a world wide sensation and strong competitor in the robot boxing industry. This movie is really wholesome because you get to see the father and son's relationship develop throughout the movie and watch them become a powerhouse team who bring in success and wealth for their family.
